OCCITANIE WINES RISE AND RISE IN THE UK

As we reveal the new 11th edition of the Sud de France 2023 Top 100, we are hugely cheered to see the latest French customs exports figures for Occitanie wines sold to the UK. They confirm increases in volume and value and dominant market share within all French still wines. This reflects the excellent value for money for which Occitanie wines are well known.

The Top 100 celebrates the best wines from the Languedoc and Roussillon vineyards, part of the Rhône Valley and the Southwest, with an expertly curated selection of the best of current winemaking. It assists the UK trade to find and source wines from producers of all styles from diverse terroirs.

There is plenty to discover, as 67% of the winning wines are new to the UK and do not have UK distribution yet. It spans prestige wines, sustainable and organic production, independent producers, private cellars, cooperatives, negociants and familiar big names.

Chairman of the judges Tim Atkin MW and 18 top writers and principal trade buyers blind-tasted and retasted 413 entries from 131 producers – a big increase on last year – in July in London. New for this year, they recognised many strong contenders for the top trophies and added a second tier of ‘wines of distinction’. There is a notable rise in wines of £20 and over, and a surge in winners from co-operatives. As the largest wine-producing region in the world, Occitanie constantly evolves.

In addition to the Sud de France Top 100 Discovery Show for trade (October 26, 2023), the Top 100 features at consumer shows such as The Chelsea Wines & Spirits Show and the Three Wine Men Big Christmas Wine Fest. Sampling further supports the wines as they become more widely available.

We look forward to meeting you at many future Sud de France events.

STRENGTH IN DIVERSITY

Tim Atkin MW talks us through this year's Top 100 and explains why the 2023 selection is a 'seriously smart group of wines'

The impact of the economy is on everyone's lips. How does the rising rate of inflation affect the wine market and the popularity of wines from Sud de France?

I think many people are looking for three main things at the moment: value for money, obviously, to make their pounds go further, but also wines with a sense of place and that offer something different. Sud de France wines deliver in all three respects. It was great to see an increase in the number of wines that retail over £20 – proof that the region can produce fine wines as well as more everyday fare – but even here, the wines often overdeliver. There's never been a better time to explore what this vast, engagingly diverse region has to offer.

Time is always precious. What are the main benefits to visiting producers and UK trade in meeting up face to face?

The best way to understand a region, not just the Sud de France, is to go there. Nothing beats tasting a wine in situ, surrounded by the landscape that produced it. And what a series of painterly landscapes these beautiful regions have to offer! But the second best what to expect to a degree. But the newcomers all told me how impressed they were by the quality of the wines, as well as the tremendous diversity on offer. As my friend Matthew Stubbs MW put it recently in his Languedoc-Roussillon 2023 Special Report on timatkin.com, the area can make “every style of wine”.

In terms of changes, it was good to see that among the whites, there are varietal wines made from Albarino and Terret, as well as more widely planted grapes like Chardonnay, Picpoul and Sauvignon Blanc. I also enjoyed the blended whites more than ever this year, with bright, mineral-edged varieties such as Vermentino, Grenache Blanc and Grenache Gris, all of which are well suited to our warming world, making a welcome appearance. If anything, the reds were even more impressive. If it's variety you're after, we chose varietal expressions of Carignan, Duras, Fer Servadou, Grenache, Malbec, Syrah and Tannat, as well as a host of both Mediterranean and “Bordeaux style” blends. It's truly a selection that I am proud of.

option it to talk to the person who farms the vineyards and makes the wine. The Sud de France is so diverse that a chat with a producer can deepen your appreciation of his or her wines. What was the vintage like? The varieties? What about the soil types? How old are the vines? The another attraction is that producers will be showcasing other wines from their ranges, not just the Top 100 winners.

In terms of the wines to taste at the Top 100 Discovery Show on October 26, what do you think they will offer visitors this year and why is it such a landmark tasting in the wine calendar?

The best thing about the tasting – and I would say this, of course – is that it's a curated selection, so a team of professional tasters has done a lot of the groundwork for you. These are a seriously smart group of wines, all of which offer outstanding value for money. The range of styles makes this an enjoyable tasting, as you will very rarely be tasting similar wines side by side. The Sud de France is making the best wines in its history and, at the risk of repeating myself, the diversity is amazing.

STELLAR LINE-UP FOR 2023

The annual judging for the Sud de France Top 100 has grown to become a favourite fixture among the UK wine fraternity, pulling in a notable cross-section of trade and critics alike. As such, it is the most rigorous assessment going of this diverse region and the results herein represent a stellar selection of wines.

Backing this assessment, Occitanie wines are also currently proving a great success story in the UK. They have achieved an 11% increase in volume and 17% value rise in the first six months of 2023 vs 2022, commanding some 30% of French wine sold here, outperforming all other French regions.

The judges were clearly impressed with the overall quality, with Helen McGinn of TV and The Knackered Mother's Wine Club fame saying: "It was a real joy to be part of the judging this year, the quality of the wines entered was impressive – and so varied from the lightest white to the deepest red and everything in between."

The wines are entered by producers, with more than 400 entries then arranged into style/AOP/IGT-based flights, which are then first tasted by the various assembled judging panels. Having eliminated those not deemed worthy of Top 100 recognition, reorganised flights are then tasted again by different judging teams, with top wines in each category elevated to medal position.

"Tasting the Top 100 is one of the highlights of my year. I've been a fan of the diverse wines from what's now known as the Sud de France for more than 30 years," says Atkins. "It's great to see them getting the recognition they deserve." ■

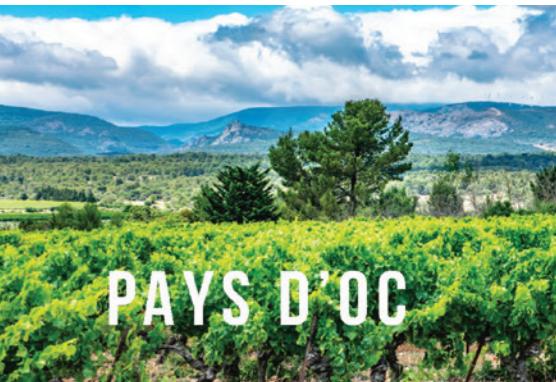

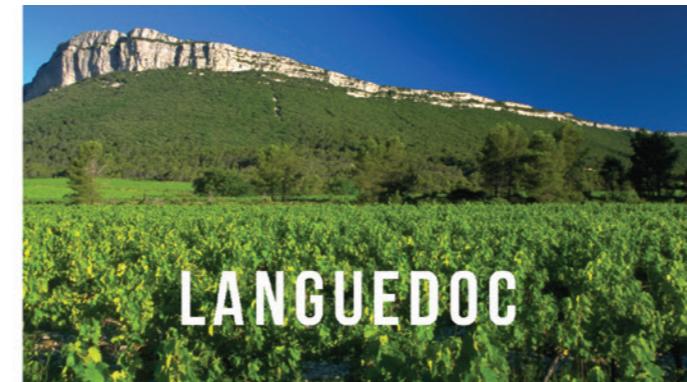

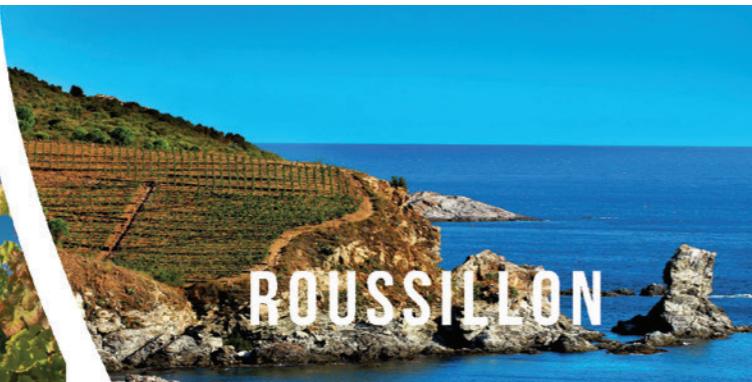

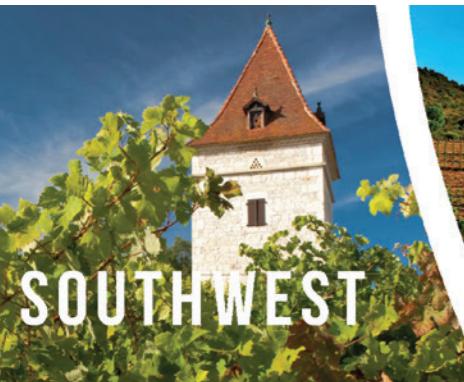

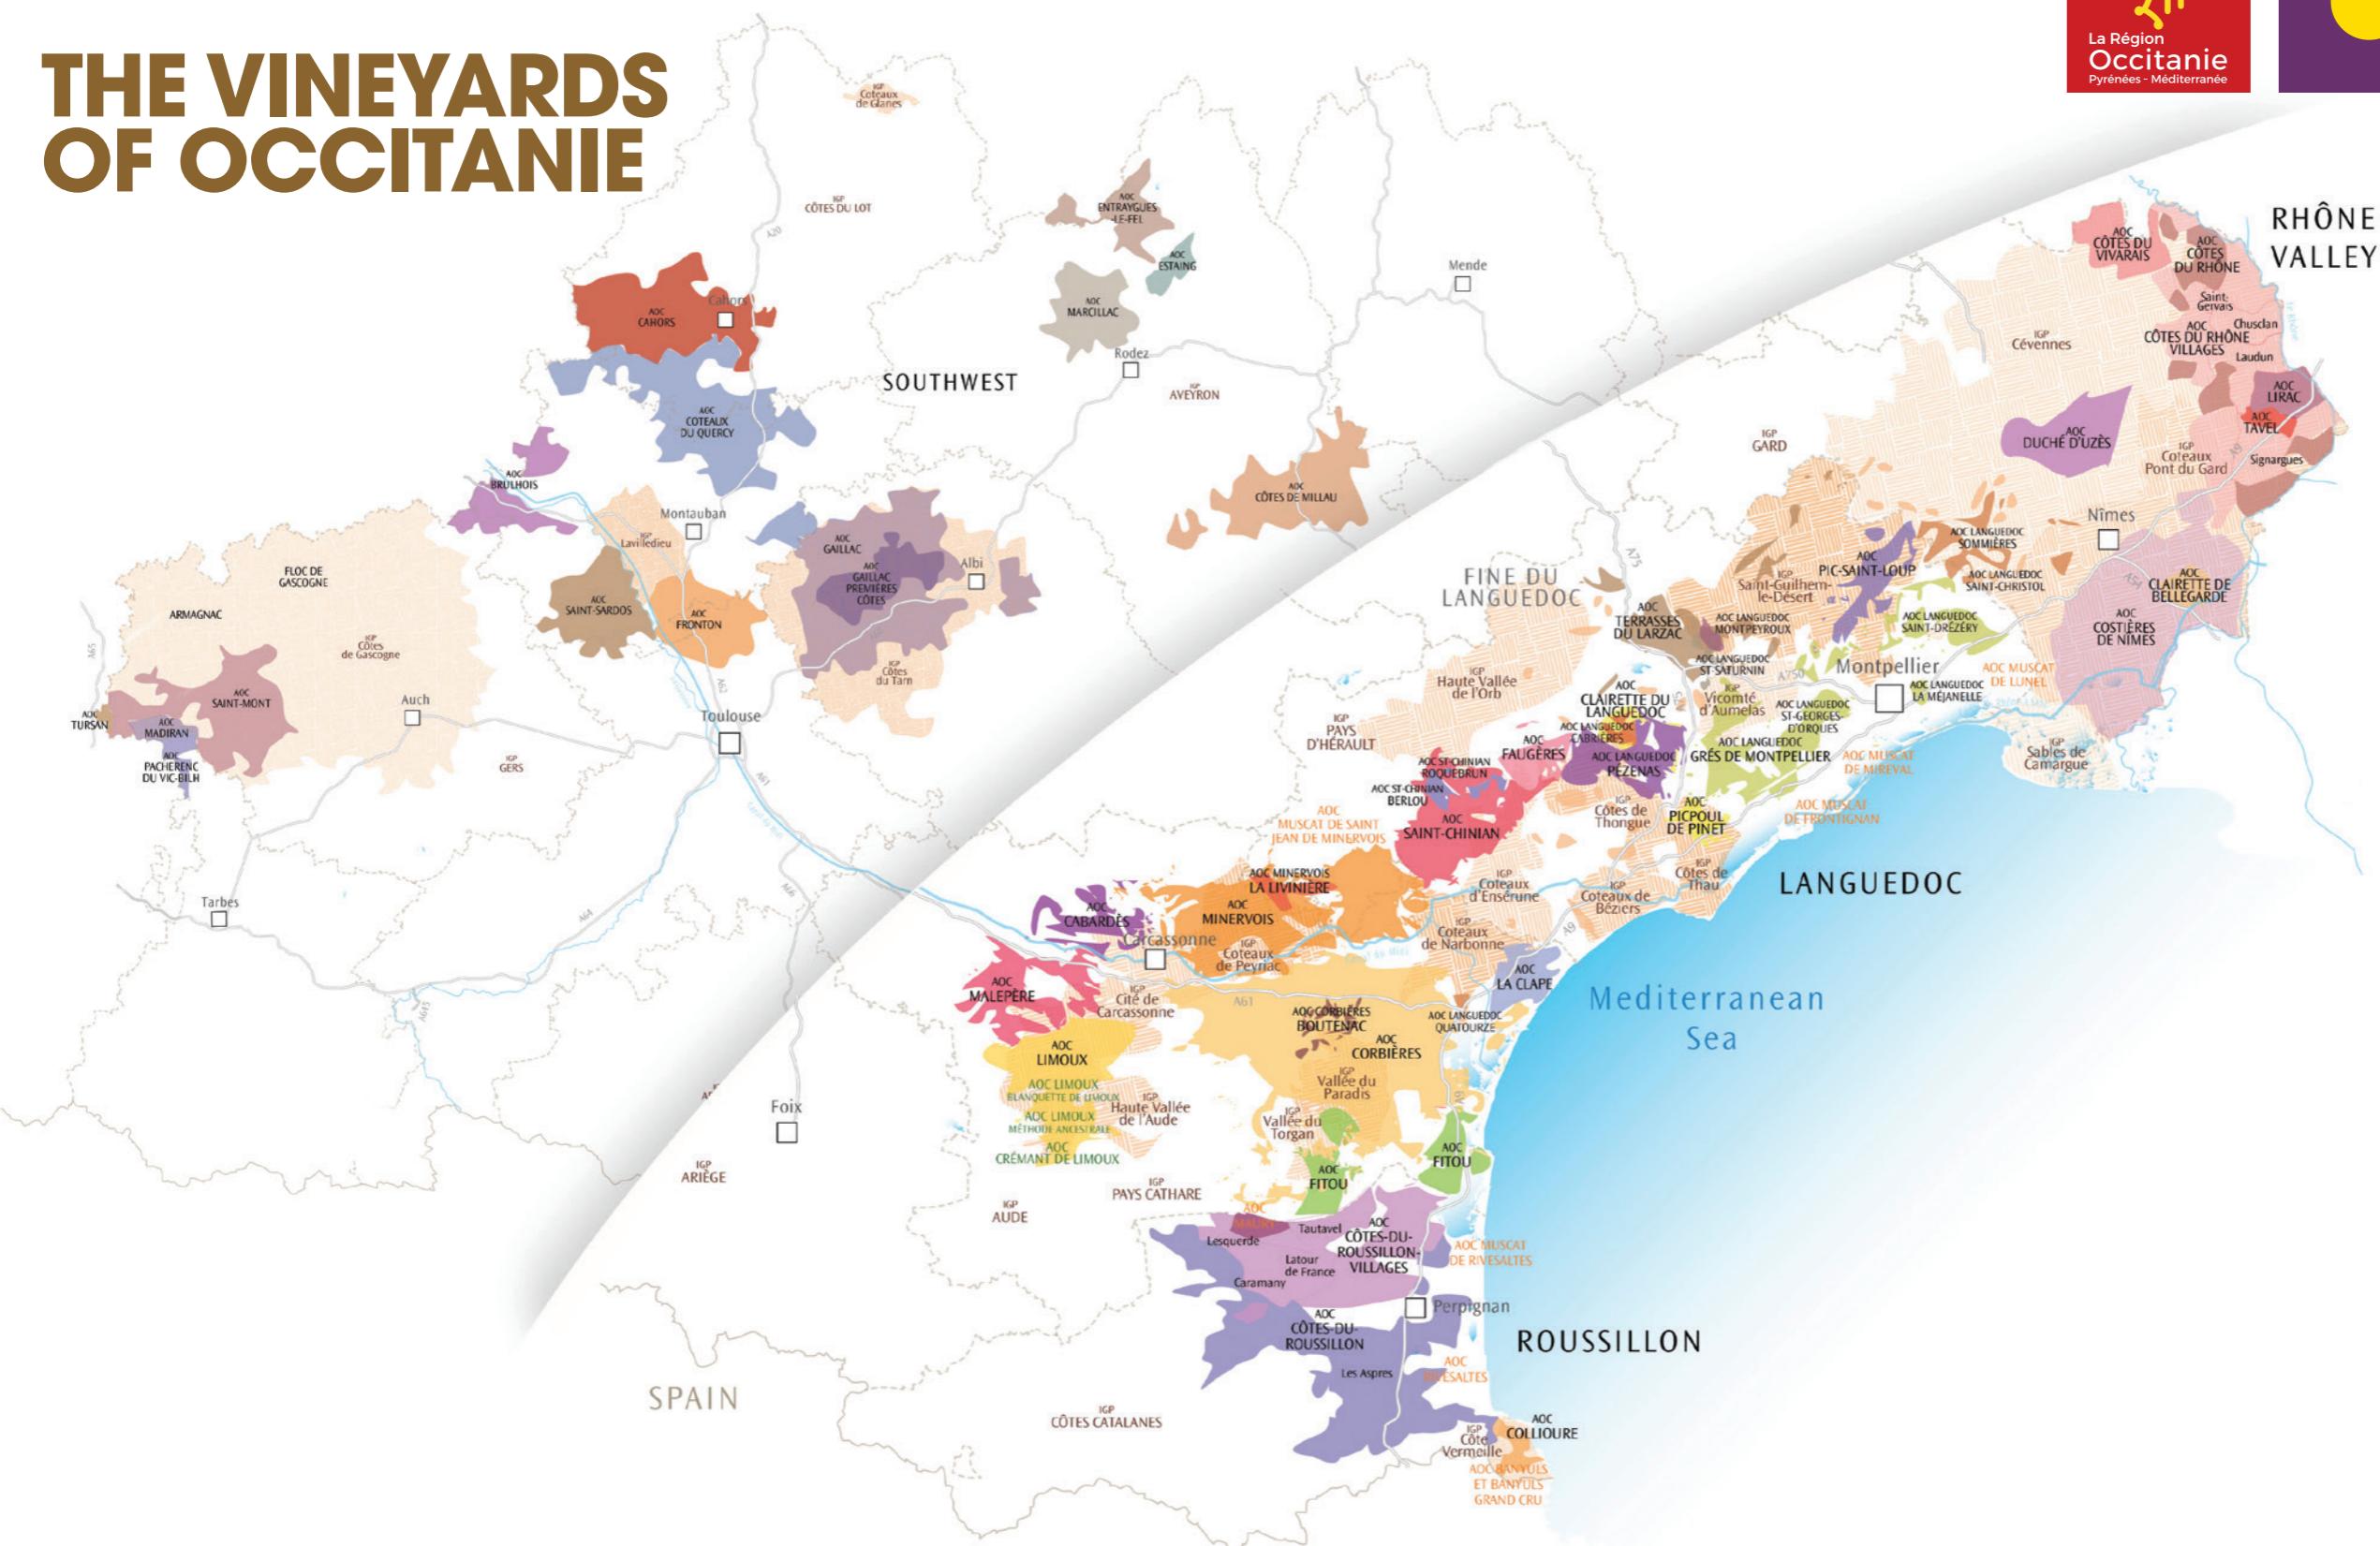

The Sud de France Top 100 competition is run in media partnership with Harpers Wine & Spirit. It aims to discover and present the best wines from Occitanie, stretching from Languedoc, Roussillon and Southwest of France through to the Rhône Valley.

LANGUEDOC

Nestled in the sun-drenched region of the south of France, swept by sea breezes and Tramontane winds that ease as they move inland, Languedoc wines benefit from Mediterranean influences. The Languedoc comprises 40,000ha of vineyards with 23 appellations and 13 regional denominations, stretching from the Cévennes and Causses massifs in the north to the Pyrenees in the south. Languedoc's vineyards span four regional départements, Aude, Hérault, Gard, and go as far south as the Pyrénées-Orientales. Such vastness offers a remarkable diversity of terroirs, featuring distinct soils, climates and grape varieties that contribute to the harmonious creation of exceptional wines. In addition to its renowned Languedoc AOP, the region boasts three departmental PGIs and 16 territorial PGIs, reflecting the cultural, natural and heritage aspects of the vineyards. This rich tapestry of traditions and passionate winegrowers dedicated to quality winemaking has been carried through generations to define the extraordinary character of Languedoc wines.

IGP PAYS D'OC

Pays d'Oc PGI wines are spread across four départements covering 120,000ha of vineyards in the Languedoc-Roussillon. Sitting along the Mediterranean coast, the area presents diverse landscapes and climates. Benefiting from Mediterranean and Atlantic influences, Pays d'Oc PGI enjoys favourable conditions for healthy vines and natural grape ripening. Some 94% of Pays d'Oc wines are devoted to single varietal styles. The denomination boasts 58 grape varieties, so the result is a wide spectrum of aromatic expressions. Each vintage produces 5.5 to 6 million hl of wine. Over half the production is red wine, and a quarter for each white and rosé wines.

ROUSSILLON

Roussillon has been shaped over centuries by nature, history and its people. Nestled within a natural amphitheatre open to the Mediterranean sea, Roussillon's vineyards are surrounded by mountain ranges and benefit from an ideal climate, perfect for the cultivation of vines. The region's tumultuous geological history, and

SUD-OUEST

The vineyards of the south-west stretch from the hills of the Massif Central to the foothills of the Pyrenees, and from the banks of the Garonne River to the beaches of the Basque Country. This fragmented area is made up of several clusters that can be grouped into six entities: the Pyrenean foothills, Gascony, Garonne, Tarn, the Lot valley and Aveyron. The region boasts diverse landscapes, including river plains, hillsides, and sandy moors, fostering unique vineyards with individual charm. The area's richness in biodiversity is evident through nearly 300 grape varieties, including 120 indigenous ones. ■
